

Charley Weeghman recently announced that his partners in the purchase of the Chicago Cubs are J. Ogden Armour, the packer, and William Wrigley, owner of a chewing gum concern, and several other business men. It is estimated that the new owners have combined resources of $75,000,000.

The recent deals have brought into baseball keen business men and capitalists whose combined wealth is more than $100,000,000.

JAPANESE GIRL TO TEACH HOME FOLKS LATEST IN DANCES

Miss Kiyoko Kachi

Japan will soon have a chance to learn all the latest American dance novelties. Miss Kiyoko Kachi, descendant of one of Tokio's most prominent families, is going to show the Nipponese how to do the tango, the fox trot and all the other innovations in terpsichorean art. Since she has been in San Francisco she has mastered everything from the three step to the Cleopatra. When she goes back home she says she intends to make the natives "sit up and take notice."

ASKS DIVORCE, SO HUSBAND CAN WED "OTHER WOMAN"

Mrs. Albert Scott, young and really beautiful, sat in the witness dock in Judge McDonald's court and pleaded for a divorce from her husband that he might marry the girl with whom he is now believed to be living in South America.

The Scotts lived in Oak Park. They were comfortably well fixed in the matter of money and lived in blissful happiness from the wedding in 1912 till a year ago. Scott was secretary-treasurer of the Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois. While the wife was visiting her mother the husband went away. Two months later came the letter from her husband, of which the following is a part:

"Owing to my preoccupation with work I was not known much in society, so I never met any one for whom I cared more than I did you. Then I met a girl—no matter whom or when—she was only 19, and as good and pure as you are. Scandal or no scandal, we decided to go away together.

"I want you to divorce me. I love her more than any human being.

"Do not allow yourself to worry over me, for you are far too good for me, just as she is. Just hate me at first. Then soften a little. Think of her.

"It is my prayer that you marry again. I know some one, who lived not far from Harbledown, who would give his right hand to have you, and you know it, too.

"In solicitude.—Bert."
